The origins of Multiexport Foods date back to 1983 when two young and adventuresome recent economics graduates - Martín Borda and Alberto del Pedregal – saw a window of opportunity in the increase in Chilean exports. They began by exporting non-traditional products such as lapislazuli and leather, but they shortly expanded their shipments to include products from the sea, such as abalone, sea snails, crabs, and hake, all processed by other companies. They are one of the original pioneers in farming salmon in Chile.
